

Japanese cartoons and comics have become a mainstream sensation in the west, and here in Australia there is an ever increasing interest in this genre of entertainment.

With innovative storylines, memorable characters and a distinct aesthetic recognisable on sight, it's no wonder that manga and anime have captured the imaginations of children and adults worldwide. Now more than ever, people are eager to learn how to draw in this style!

Tsunami Hee Ja is an Adelaide based freelance illustrator who has been creating anime inspired artwork for over a decade. During this time she has hosted a number of workshops teaching the basics of drawing manga to students of all ages.

You can contract Tsunami to teach workshops at libraries or schools for sessions of one hour or more (maximum 20 per class). Instructional handouts will be provided for students to use and take home, and lessons can even be catered to a chosen theme.

Relaxed sit in workshops are a popular addition to festivals and other busy events. Attendees are able to join and sketch along to drawing demonstrations for as long as they choose without the inconvenience of needing to book. A minimum of two hours is recommended, seating a maximum of 15 students at any time.
